

Our Contributors

Wendy Atkin is pursuing a PhD in History at Carleton University, researching a thesis on child care practices in Canada. She has held contract positions with the National Archives and has been an Acting Public Affairs Coordinator with the National Association of Women and the Law.

After obtaining an MScin protein chemistry from the University of British Columbia and an MAC in conservation science from Queen's University, Helen D. Burgess was hired in 1978 by the Conservation Processes Research Division of the Canadian Conservation Institute. Her current title is Senior Conservation Scientist, and she is responsible for the coordination of research being done in the area of paper conservation. Major past and present projects include archival tapes, chemical stabilization of paper with borohydrides, use of enzymes in conservation, mass deacidification, and the development of recommendations for alkaline washing. An important future project involves investigation of the characteristics of permanent paper.

Linda Chakmak is the Assistant Municipal Archivist for the Municipal Archives-Windsor Public Library. She has a Master of Library Science degree from the University of Western Ontario (1984). In addition to having served on the Executives of the Archives Association of Ontario and the Southwestern Ontario Archivists Association, she is currently Past President of the Essex County Historical Society.

Terry Cook is on a one-year assignment as Director of the Records Disposition Division at the National Archives of Canada. A former General Editor of Archivaria, he remains on its Editorial Board, as well as that of The American Archivist. He has written widely on archival theory, appraisal, electronic records and the fonds concept, and last year undertook a month-long invitational lecturing tour of Australia. He still enjoys reading history.

Wendy Duff is currently working on her doctorate at the University of Pittsburgh. Previously she has been the coordinator of Technical Services at the Provincial Library, a teacher in the Nova Scotia Community College Library Technicians Course and Librarian at the Public Archives of Nova Scotia. She has also taught a course on the Organization of Knowledge at Dalhousie's School of Library and Information Studies. She presently serves as an ACA member on the Planning Committee on Descriptive Standards and on the International Congress of Archives Ad hoc Commission on Descriptive Standards.

Terry Eastwood has been Chair of the Master of Archival Studies Program in the School of Library, Archival, and Information Studies at the University of British Columbia since 1981. He has written widely about archival education and other subjects. He is currently a member of the Bureau of Canadian Archivists' Planning Committee on Descriptive Standards and Chair of the National Archives of Canada Advisory Board. He was a practicing archivist between 1973 and 1981. His formal education was in history and education.

Louise Gagnon-Arguin est professeure adjointe de l'École de bibliothéconomie et des sciences de l'information de l'Université de Montréal. Elle y enseigne l'archivistique depuis 1985. Détentrice d'un doctorat en histoire, elle vient de publier sa thèse de doctorat en histoire aux Presses de l'Université du Québec sous le titre : L'archivistique, ses acteurs, son histoire depuis 1960. Elle a assumé de 1982 à 1990 la direction de la revue Archives de l'Association des archivistes du Québec. Elle oeuvre au sein du Comité canadien de planification sur les normes de descriptions.

Hugh A. Halliday is the post-1918 historian at the Canadian War Museum and was, from 1976 to 1986, the Curator of War Art at the same institution. He is the author of five books on military aviation history. He also dabbles in great Canadian disasters and the history of duelling in Canada.

Margaret E. Johnston teaches in the Department of Geography and is an associate of the Centre for Northern Studies at Lakehead University. Through research on the history of mountain recreation, she has encountered many archives and many guides to archival resources.

Susan Kooyman has been an archivist at the Glenbow Archives in Calgary since 1986. She holds a B.A. in Canadian studies from the University of Manitoba and an M.A. in history from the University of Calgary. She began her archival career at the Provincial Archives of Alberta in 1981. She spent 1982 to 1985 in New Zealand, during which time she worked at the Hocken Archives and as the Dunedin City Council archivist.

Heather MacNeil received her MA in English from Simon Fraser University in 1984 and her MAS from the University of British Columbia in 1987. She has worked as a records archivist at the University of Toronto Archives (1986-88) and as project coordinator for the Bureau of Canadian Archivists' Planning Committee on Descriptive Standards (1988-91). She is currently working for the National Archives of Canada's Vancouver Pilot Project. She has served on a number of national and regional archival committees, among them, the Subject Indexing and Textual Records Working Groups for the Bureau of Canadian Archivists, the Select Committee on Ethics and 1992 Programme Committee for the Association of Canadian Archivists, and the Freedom of Information and Privacy and Archival Legislation Committees for the Archives Association of British Columbia. Her study of privacy issues affecting archivists, Without Consent: The Ethics of Disclosing Personal Information in Public Archives, was published by Scarecrow Press in 1992.

Grant Mitchell has been coordinator of the Records Management Unit at the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia since 1991 and is responsible for records management programs and the Corporate Archive. From 1987 to 1991 he was a Records and Archive Management Analyst at ICBC. Before joining ICBC, Grant worked at the Anglican Diocese of British Columbia Archives and as a records analyst at British Columbia's Ministry of the Attorney General. He received his Master of Archival Studies degree from the University of British Columbia in 1987.

William R. Morrison is the Dean of Research and Graduate Studies at the University of Northern British Columbia. He is the author of numerous books and articles on the history of the Canadian North, and was involved in the production of the four-volume series, The Inventory of Archival Resources in Western Manitoba.

Ann Pederson is Senior Lecturer in Archives Administration and Records Management in the School of Information, Library, and Archive Studies (SILAS) at the University of New South Wales, Sydney, Australia. Before emigrating to Australia, Ann spent ten years at the Georgia Department of Archives and History in a number of different capacities, culminating in the position of Director of the Archives Division with responsibility for all archival functions. Her professional achievements include co-authorship (with Gail Farr) of Archives and Manuscripts: Public Programs (1982), prime responsibility for the first edition of Keeping Archives (1987), and a number of innovative professional and continuing education activities. Most recently she has collaborated with the Australian Archives to devise a distance education course in archives and records management. Ann is a Fellow of the Society of American Archivists.

Chris Plagnol is the archivist at Victoria Hospital and sits on the executive of the London Chapter of the Archives Association of Ontario. He holds a Bachelor of Arts from the University of British Columbia and a Master of Library and Information Science from the University of Western Ontario.

John W. Roberts has served as Chief of the Office of Archives of the US Federal Bureau of Prisons since 1987. From 1978 to 1982 and 1985 to 1987 he was staff archivist at the US National Archives, and from 1982 to 1985 he was Director of Development Services at Trinity College in Washington, DC. He holds a PhD in history from the University of Maryland, has published numerous articles on prison history and the history of American foreign relations, and is a contributor to the forthcoming Encyclopedia of American Prisons. His book, Escaping Prison Myths: Selected Topics in the History of Federal Corrections is scheduled for publication in May 1994 by American University Press.

Roy Schaeffer entered the archives world in 1976. He has served as assistant archivist of the Toronto Harbour Commissioners Archives, Archivist/Records Administrator of Imperial Oil Limited, archivist of the Law Society of Upper Canada, and records management consultant to the Legal Services Society of British Columbia. Having recently undertaken the Master of Archival Studies program at the University of British Columbia, he is now working as a consultant in government, education, and the professions, and is the Chair of the ACA Education Committee.

Guy St-Denis is in charge of reference services in the Regional Collection of the D.B. Weldon Library at the University of Western Ontario. Between 1982 and 1985 he researched and wrote Byron: Pioneer Days in Westminster Township (Crinklaw Press, 1985). Since 1990 he has edited Historian, the annual journal of the London and Middlesex Historical Society. He also edited Simcoe's Choice: Celebrating London's Bicentennial, 1793-1993 (Dundurn, 1993). St-Denis has contributed articles to Families, Ontario History, and Archivaria. He is currently working towards the completion of his Bachelor of Arts in History (Honours), with a special interest in Upper Canadian urban and transportation development.

David Wood is Professor of Geography at York University. His BA and MA studies were at the University of Toronto; his PhD at Edinburgh University. His research embraces the history of conservation in Canada, pioneer settlement in North America, and comparisons of the colonial experience in the British Empire. He was recently the Visiting Fellow in Canadian Studies at Macquarie University, Australia. He edited Perspectives on Landscape and Settlement in Nineteenth-Century Ontario, and recently published "Morraine and Metropolis: the Oak Ridges and the Greater Toronto Area."