

Our Contributors

Wendy Duff is currently working on her doctorate at the University of Pittsburgh. Previously she has been the Coordinator of Technical Services at the Provincial Library, a teacher in the Nova Scotia Community College Library Technicians Course, and Librarian at the Public Archives of Nova Scotia. She has also taught a course on the Organization of Knowledge at Dalhousie's School of Library and Information Studies. She presently serves as an ACA member on the Planning Committee on Descriptive Standards and on the International Congress of Archives Ad hoc Commission on Descriptive Standards.

Luciana Duranti is Associate Professor in the Master of Archival Studies Programme (MAS) at the School of Library, Archival, and Information Studies, University of British Columbia, a position she has held since 1987. Prior to this, she was a Researcher Professor in the Special School for Archivists and Librarians at the University of Rome (1982-87); served as State Archivist in the State Archives of Rome (1978-1982); and was Project Archivist for the Italian National Research Council (1974-77). Professor Duranti holds a Doctorate in Arts (1973) and a Master of Archival Science (1975) from the University of Rome, and a Master of Archivistics, Paleography, and Diplomatics from the School of Archivistics, Paleography, and Diplomatics of the State Archives of Rome (1979). In addition to her university responsibilities, she is active nationally and internationally in several archival associations, and publishes widely on archival history and theory, and on diplomatics.

Daniel German received his BA and MA. in history from the University of Saskatchewan, following them with an MLIS from McGill University. He has worked for the Directorate of History, of the Department of National Defence, and has spent two and a half years as an Access to Information and Privacy Analyst with the National Archives of Canada. He has published articles in Saskatchewan History and Fontanus, and has written book reviews for Archivaria and the Canadian Library Journal.

Larry J. Hackman is Director of the Harry S. Truman Presidential Library in Independence, Missouri. Previous to this recent appointment, he was Assistant Commissioner for Archives and Records in the New York State Education Department, the home of the State Archives and Records Administration. He was also Executive Officer of the new State Archives Partnership Trust. A Fellow of the Society of American Archivists, Hackman was the first Director of the Records

Program of the National Historical Publications and Records Commission. His main professional interests over the past two decades have included the usefulness of profession-wide, state-wide, and nation-wide archival priorities, ways to develop support for individual archives, and building interest in and support for archives and documentation issues among influential parties beyond the archival community.

Richard Klumpenhouwer was a student in the Master of Archival Studies programme at the University of British Columbia from 1984 to 1986 and received his MAS degree in 1988. He also holds an MA in History from the University of Western Ontario. He has been Archivist of the Legal Society of Alberta in Calgary since its inception in 1990 and prior to that worked at the City of Calgary Archives. He has published in areas of archival appraisal and legal archives.

Victoria Lemieux obtained her Bachelor of Arts from the University of Toronto. She received her Masters in Archival Studies from the University of British Columbia. Her thesis was on the topic of Canadian provincial and territorial archival legislation. Since completing her studies, Victoria has worked as a Records Analyst for the government of British Columbia, a Government Records Archivist in the Provincial Archives of Alberta, and Director of Corporate Records and Information Services for the City of Edmonton. Recently she left Canada to become Campus Records Manager for the University of the West Indies's Mona Campus in Kingston, Jamaica.

Heather MacNeil received her MA in English from Simon Fraser University in 1984 and her MAS from the University of British Columbia in 1987. She has worked as a Records Archivist at the University of Toronto Archives (1986-88) and as Project Coordinator for the Bureau of Canadian Archivists's Planning Committee on Descriptive Standards (1988-91). She is currently working for the National Archives of Canada's Vancouver Pilot Project. She has served on a number of national and regional archival committees, among them, the Subject Indexing and Textual Records Working Groups for the Bureau of Canadian Archivists, the Ethics and 1992 Programme Committees for the Association of Canadian Archivists, and the Freedom of Information and Privacy and Archival Legislation Committees for the Archives Association of British Columbia. Her study of privacy issues affecting archivists, Without Consent: The Ethics of Disclosing Personal Information in Public Archives, was published by Scarecrow Press in 1992.

John McDonald is the Director of the Information Management Standards and Practices Division of the National Archives of Canada. While with the National Archives he has served in a number of capacities related to the archival management of electronic records. In his current position he is responsible for a programme that assists federal government institutions in managing their records, regardless of the records' physical forms. A particular area of interest is the management of information in office systems. He received an MA in Historical Geography from Carleton University in Ottawa.

Bruce P. Montgomery is Assistant Professor and Curator of Archives, University of Colorado at Boulder. In 1992, he launched the Human Rights Initiative, a project to collect, preserve, and make available the records and papers of international human rights non-governmental organizations and individual activists.

Michael Nelson, at the time of writing this article, was Group Chief, Information Policy, with the Treasury Board of Canada. He is now the Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Forces Housing Agency, Department of National Defence.

Jean-Stéphen Piché has been working as a Government Records Archivist at the National Archives of Canada since 1991. Among other records, he is currently responsible for the archival holdings of the Department of Public Works and Government Services. Jean-Stéphen holds a Masters in history from the Université de Montréal.

Jane Turner is Archivist and Records Manager for the University of Victoria Archives. Previously, she was the Community Archivist for the Nanaimo Community Archives Society. She presently serves as Chair of the ACA University and College Archives Special Interest Section, is the ACA Director Without Portfolio, and is a member of the AABC Education Committee and AABC Publication Committee. She received her MA in Canadian Studies from Carleton University in 1985, and her MAS from the University of British Columbia in 1992.

David A. Wallace holds a BA in anthropology from the State University of New York in Binghamton and earned an MLS from the State University of New York at Albany in 1988. Prior to obtaining his MLS he worked for several years as an archaeologist. Between 1988 and 1992 he was employed at the National Security Archive in Washington, DC, where he served as Records/Database/Systems Manager. While at the NSA he also acted as Technical Editor to their Making of U.S. Policy declassified documents series. He is currently pursuing a doctoral degree in the School of Library and Information Science at the University of Pittsburgh, concentrating on the archival implications of national security information policy.

Robin Wylie is currently at work on his Master of Archival Studies thesis. He holds a doctorate in Canadian history and has worked as a university lecturer and public historian. He has also worked as a project archivist for the University of Saskatchewan and Vancouver's Downtown Eastside Residents' Association, and as Records Manager for British Columbia's Open Learning Agency (Knowledge Network).